Brief History

The City of Bloomington was laid out and the first lots sold in 1831. Incorporation came nineteen years later—in 1850. The first mayor was David L. Perry, and the council was formed from six wards of the city. The commission form of government was briefly adopted between 1914 and 1922, when the aldermanic form returned. In 1952, the city adopted the council / city manager style of government.

Scope

This collection is comprised of various publications by the city, news clippings regarding the city government and services, the history of the three City Hall buildings, and more.
